

Continuation of learning YEAR 1 WEEK 4 WB 27.4.20

Good morning! Well, we are about to start another new week of exciting learning! We have a challenge for you this week - each day can you learn how to say 'Hello, how are you?' in another language? For example in French this would be 'Bonjour, comment allez-vous?' I wonder how far around the world we will get! Try to record what you find out - you could even print off a world map and fill in the countries as you go!

Maths

Thinking about our work from last week, we are now going to look at adding equal groups.

For this activity you need to get 3 pairs of socks. Make sure they are pairs so that the groups you have will be equal.

Sort them into their pairs - these are their equal groups.

First count up how many pairs of socks you have:

There are ____ pairs of socks.

Each pair has ____ socks.

Can you write a number sentence to show this?

____ + ____ + ____ = ____

There are ____ socks altogether.

There are bunches of balloons.

Now have a go at this problem

How many balloons altogether?

$$\square + \square + \square + \square = \square$$

What if there was 1 more bunch?

English

We are continuing to look at poetry this week.

Last Friday you looked at 'aliteration' - can you remember what this means?

Today you are going to be 'alliteration detectives!'

Look at the poems below and find the alliteration - if you can print them off you could underline the alliteration on the sheet. Otherwise just listen and talk about the alliteration you hear, recording it if you want to.

See if you can find some other alliterative poems to share and read together on the internet.

Our dog's name is Roomba.
He's such a great pup.
If food hits our carpet,
he vacuums it up.

He's constantly sniffing
for food he can "clean."
Our floors are the tidiest
you've ever seen.

There's practically nothing
this puppy won't eat.
He'll munch on the tiniest
morsel of meat.

He'll suck up spaghetti.
He'll polish off peas.
He'll chow down on berries
and cherries and cheese.

He'll lick up linguine.
He'll gobble up grapes.
He'll pig out on pancakes
and waffles and crepes.

The floor in our kitchen
has never been neater.
We're lucky our puppy
is such a good eater.

Our Roomba's a marvelous
morsel remover.
He learned from our other dogs,
Dyson and Hoover.

— Kenn Nesbitt

Spinning Dry

If I had a choice, when it's time to get clean
I'd like to jump into our washing machine for sudsing and soaking and rolling and churning and bobbing and bubbling and twisting and turning.

Next come my chance to feel just like a flyer
as I get to hop out and spin in the dryer.
I'd roll all around with a fluttering flopping,
just floating and turning with no thought of stopping.

It sounds like such fun, this incredible fling,
that I wouldn't mind if I got static cling.

by Denise Rodgers

Slithery, Slidery, Scaly Old Snake

Slithery, slidery, scaly old snake,
surely your body must be a mistake.
Your eyes, mouth and tongue wisely stay on your head.
It seems that your body is all tail instead.
You gobble your dinner, you swallow it whole --
a mouse or a frog or a turtle or mole.
Ugh!
Why don't you eat ice cream or chocolatey cake!
Oh slithery, slidery, scaly old snake.

by Denise Rodgers

Additional Learning: Science

Over the next couple of days we are going to be thinking about science and learning about plants!

Draw a beautiful garden and fill it with lovely flowers. You can draw some flowers from your own garden or use the sheet below and pick your favourites! Label them with their names.

buddleia

clematis

dahlia

fuschia

heather

hollyhock

honeysuckle

iris

lavender

lily

lupin

pansy

poppy

primula

rhododendron

rose

sunflower

sweetpea

wallflower

wisteria